This "sequel" to Boardroom Backstabs is not that at all. It's unrelated material and a barebones structure for a series of games, that consists mostly of an idea how a campaign might go, and little else. As a GM, I'm always looking for material I can use to save time planning another adventure, so I can make use of whatever pre-genned material I can get my filthy mitts on, but the first book in the series was so complete. If the first book was a leather jacket, this is a tissue paper pattern, some scissors, and no instructions on where or how to acquire a cow.

A fun read and more information. May the mayhem continue. A good run to take your runner out of there element.

This pre-gen campaign focuses on working for Knight Errant. Has plenty of in-game sub-plots and is able to be used as a off shoot for running a law enforcement game or runners infiltrating the ranks. Good corp spy related game setting
